I have identified the following three important key areas of SoTL:

1) Include research into the teaching practice in a systematic way for a better learner experience, it can be tested and implemented in classrooms and let the learner's share their experience that how it has enhanced their learning experience.

2) Another key area of SoTL is developing a culture of enquiry in the classroom, where the students feel comfortable in asking the questions and teachers can answer those questions in a more efficient manner with their experiences. Various kinds of information gathering techniques can be used in the classrooms like surveys, interviews, questionnaires to get the feedback from students about their learning experience. For Ex: Start, Stop, Continue surveys can be used.

3) Reflection is also one of the key characteristics of SoTL, it is not only about reflective practice but also about enquiry into student learning. It is also about bringing the scholarly habits of teachers in the classrooms for a great learning experience of students.
