

Cultivate My PLN – Agile

I started the Ontario Extend's Collaborator module over two weeks ago and I started with activating my Twitter account to get started with my Personal Learning Network (PLN). I searched and followed some Twitter accounts in Educational Technology and local news. I explored the Twitter EdChat calendar and Inside Higher Ed's Twitter directory. I was not able to find anything specific to "agile", "scrum" or "systems analysis". I plan to continue my Twitter search and to connect to more people or digital influencers in my areas of interests.

Next, I reviewed my LinkedIn account and found several existing professional and academic connections. I also have connections with my students. As my students graduate and become professionals, they become part of my PLN.

In the college, my PLN includes the various faculties and the professional development staff. Recently, To get myself up-to-date, I continuously join conferences and seminars, as best as I can. Recently, I volunteered to the virtual Agile 2021 conference and I continue to expand my PLN by adding my connections to LinkedIn and Twitter. A summary of my PLN is shown below.
