Currency: The timeliness of the information:      When was the resource published or posted?      Has the resource been revised or updated?      Does your topic require current information?      Are the links functional?      When was the resource published or posted?      Does your topic require current information?

This resource was created on November 26, 2020 and was last updated 5 months ago. This topic/activity does not necessarily require current information. All the links are functional and activity works well.

Relevance: The importance of the information for your needs      Does the resource relate to your needs?      Who is the intended audience?      Is the information in the resource at an appropriate level for your learners?

Yes, the resource relates to my needs as it assists students with understanding how to successfully create SMART goals. The intended audience would be students and the information is appropriate.

Authority: The source of the information      Who is the creator?      What are their credentials or organizational affiliations?      Are they qualified to write on this topic?

Rob Harrison is the creator and Rob is a faculty member at Georgian College. I'm not sure of Rob's qualifications as I haven't been able to find them on H5P but the writing doesn't include any opinions or anything; it's just a tool for students to use to create their SMART goals.

Accuracy: The reliability and truthfulness of the information      Is the information supported by evidence?      Has the resource been reviewed or refereed?      Are there spelling, grammar, or typographical errors?

The brief sentence that talks about the SMART Goal Setting model is sourced. There are many sources that discuss using this model and the questions asked in the resource are relevant. From what I can see, the resource has not been reviewed or refereed and there are no errors.

Purpose: The reason the information exists (to inform, teach, sell, entertain, or persuade?)
Why does this resource exist? Is the information fact, opinion, or propaganda?
Are there political, ideological, cultural, religious, institutional, or personal biases?

This resource exists as a tool to help student set SMART goals and to complete an assessment. The information is fact and there are no biases.

Notes: Are there additional questions or observations you have about this material that affect your decision to use it? (i.e. this is an opinion piece that I will use to demonstrate one side of an argument).

The one thing I would add would be to have students write a sentence stating what their goal is after completing the activity. Another question I would ask myself is “Is the resource accessible”?

Final Recommendation: Will you use this resource? Why or why not?

Yes, I really like how this resource is laid out and how it is easy to use. I think it will help students who struggle grasping how to use the SMART goal setting model.
