Motivation:

- Improve student/faculty satisfaction
- Student engagement
- Student learning outcomes
- Recognize diverse audience

methodology accuracy.

Three Motivations:

- Renewed personal excitement about teaching, learning and greater self-awareness - As a lifelong learner I really enjoy staying current in my teaching practices and continuously looking at how to make positive improvements
- Increased student engagement, learning and a broader ability to reach more students - Being open to diverse points of view, asking key questions and active listening help reach a wider audience of learners
- Stronger overall faculty that values teaching, student learning and working as a cohesive team - Teaching is often a solitary role so it is critically important to connect, collaborate and share our knowledge and best practices to ensure greater shared success

I too, am a life-long learner. Researching and implementing new ideas into my classroom not only helps student learning, it keeps me fresh and motivated

I agree with this motivation - you must be aware of yourself, your feelings, your attitude. You must be committed to continuous learning to improve yourself, as well as the student experience.
