

Teacher for Learning What is your metaphor for teaching and learning?

1. Find a photo or draw a picture that can represent your own metaphor.>> 'Crawl before you Walk' Explain the analogy in writing and include a visual metaphorical representation of this analogy >>Crawl before you walk and take steps (stages), then refine a final product to increase productivity.

2. Narrate why this image represents you and your approach as a teacher.>> How to form team roles on a new team. Many groups jump into roles they think they are best suited for. It is best to take a 'crawl before you walk' approach.
3. expand on how you would explain your concept through an analogy. >> I suggest you take 'Baby steps and crawl before you walk'. Understand each other's strengths and preference and then form roles from those qualities. Work on a few activities together, take a survey, then assign team roles. Think of what is best for team productivity and how to leverage each members skills.

Regards,
David Schenk
Conestoga College Instructor
dschenk@conestogac.on.ca