

Tending to a Garden

My metaphor for teaching is tending and nurturing a garden. Just as a gardener carefully cultivates plants, a teacher guides and supports the growth and development of learners. This metaphor captures the idea that teaching involves deliberate care, attention, and cultivation of learners' knowledge and skills, leading to their growth, development, and blossoming into capable individuals.