For my experimenter badge I chose the Survey, to see if I would use it in my own classes, the virtual tour, as I already assign an assignment asking the students to explore the websites of museums, the tours may just give them another opportunity to explore objects in specific museums. And Lastly, I chose to act as a student, of which I am and upload my course notes into the Quizlet program. This was a great help, and I can see if I suggest to my students to use it they will greatly benefit from the activity.

I wanted to choose the Creative Commons uploading activity, but I received an error message of forbidden. I'm glad I was forced to choose another activity in its place.

I did not complete an activity on my smartphone, and this is because I feel very uncomfortable with this platform of sharing all my activities with anybody who joins the extend program. I feel as though the activities you expect us to share with complete strangers is a bit overwhelming and not at all cognizant of the possibility of emotional stress on your practitioners who suffer, like I do, with anxiety and CPTSD. CPTSD from stranger attacks.

I would like to complete the program, but I will only be sharing activities I feel are safe for me to do so.

I will not be creating a video and uploading it for all and anybody to see. I have a couple of videos I have created with my own art practice, and if you would like to view those, please do so. But my personal, expression of learning I would like to keep private, for me and a select few of you who are judging my work.

Thank you for your accommodations for me, someone who suffers from invisible mental health issues, and who does not appreciate the complete openness of this program. There is absolutely no experience of anonymity or choice with what is shared on your platform, and that is not following Accessibility guidelines as presented with the AODA.

Please consider allowing for more privacy, and confidentiality in the program.
