

Teaching shares a profound similarity with gardening, as they both are grounded in passion, love, and patience. As a gardener cares for individual plants based on varying conditions, teachers nurture the minds of unique students. Both teaching and gardening require a deep appreciation for the process of nurturing and growth. While both can appear repetitive, they are also incredibly rewarding.

